

does not put this under NEOC, as I read it, although it is in the same statute, same section. It says the only, the full remedy for an individual claiming a violation of this section is civil damages. So I'm not sure that it would be under NEOC or not. I mean it doesn't appear to be, but I can't really tell by virtue of the amendment whether it falls under the NEOC rules and regulations or not. I understand what Senator Chambers is saying regarding how he will fight on this bill. I think we watched part of that process last Friday. I think this is one where there probably is not an auction price that is going to be met anywhere along the line. I just have one question for Senator Will.

SPEAKER BAACK: Senator Will.

SENATOR WILL: Certainly.

SENATOR HOHENSTEIN: You mentioned earlier that at the appropriate time you intend to withdraw the amendment. I am just wondering whether the time is appropriate yet?

SENATOR WILL: Well, I don't believe it's in order for me to withdraw the amendment while there is an amendment pending to it, Senator Hohenstein.

SENATOR HOHENSTEIN: Okay. Procedurally, it is not appropriate. I am suggesting that perhaps it is as soon as we get through with the amendment to the amendment. Thank you.

SPEAKER BAACK: Thank you, Senator Hohenstein. Senator Hillman. Senator Chambers.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Never mind.

SPEAKER BAACK: Senator Hillman.

SENATOR HILLMAN: Mr. Speaker, members, Senator Will, would you yield to a question, please?

SPEAKER BAACK: Senator Will.

SENATOR WILL: Certainly.

SENATOR HILLMAN: You passed out a letter, Senator Will, and I wonder if you would turn to the second page, and I believe it is
